

When mortals are alive, they worry about death. When they're dead, they worry about hunger. There is the Great Uncertainty. But sages don't consider the past. And they don't worry about the future. They cling to the present. And from moment to moment they follow the path.